www.rowan.edu/wa

This 15-hour certificate provides broad-based study and practice in a variety of writing forms, creative and expository, personal and public, which will in turn empower educators in their approaches to teaching writing in K-12 education. Students will learn how writers compose in print and new media forms and how audiences react to their writing. In classroom workshops and peer response groups, through lecture and discussion, and by creating and composing multiple drafts and revisions, students develop sensitivity to rhetorical considerations of audience, purpose, and genre.
